

Chapter 1: Setting Up Your CRM

Book: Tools That Make Revenue Easier

Purpose of this chapter: Track leads, sales, and customers in one place so revenue does not slip through the cracks.

What This Chapter Is About (Plain Language)

A CRM is simply one place to track: - Who contacted you - What they wanted - Whether they booked or not - What the next step is

It replaces memory, sticky notes, text threads, and guessing with clarity. As stated in the book, a CRM does not create revenue — it protects revenue that would otherwise be lost.

Fake Company Context (Used for This Chapter)

Business: ClearFlow Pressure Washing

Type: Local service business

Owner: Solo operator

Lead sources: Website form, texts, calls, Facebook messages, referrals

Core problem: Quotes sent → follow-ups missed → jobs never booked

This chapter builds a CRM that fits this exact reality.

The Job of the CRM (From the Book)

The CRM has one job:

Make sure every lead is seen, tracked, and followed up.

If a lead contacted the business, the CRM should be able to answer: - Who is this? - What do they want? - Where are they in the process? - What needs to happen next?

If it can do that, it is working.

What the CRM Must Track (Beginner Level)

According to the book, you only need five fields on Day One.

Required CRM Fields

1. Lead Name

Who contacted you

2. Contact Info

Phone number or email

3. What They Want

Example: driveway, siding, patio, full house wash

4. Status

5. New Lead

6. Quoted

7. Booked

8. Completed

9. Lost

10. Next Step

What you will do next, and when

Nothing else is required at this stage.

ClearFlow CRM Entry Examples

Example 1: Active Lead

- Name: John Smith
- Contact: 555-123-4567
- Service: Driveway + walkway
- Source: Website
- Status: Quoted
- Next Step: Follow up Thursday

Example 2: Booked Job

- Name: Maria Lopez
- Contact: Facebook DM
- Service: Full house wash
- Source: Facebook
- Status: Booked
- Next Step: Job scheduled Friday 9am

These entries are enough to run the business calmly and professionally.

What Goes Into the CRM (Day One Rule)

Every single inquiry goes into the CRM: - Website form submissions - Text messages - Phone calls - Facebook / Instagram DMs - Referrals

If someone contacts the business, they get logged.

The book is clear: No tracking = leaked revenue.

What NOT to Do (Direct From the Chapter)

Do not: - Rely on memory - Track leads in multiple places - Wait until “later” to log leads - Overbuild the CRM with extra fields - Treat CRM as admin work

CRM is revenue work.

The Daily CRM Habit (Non-Negotiable)

At the end of each workday:

1. Log any new leads that came in
2. Update statuses (Quoted, Booked, Lost)
3. Review the Next Step column
4. Follow up with anyone due that day

This takes 5–10 minutes.

The book emphasizes: the system you follow will outperform the tool you wish you had.

Why This Chapter Works

Before CRM:

“I think I followed up with everyone.”

After CRM:

“I know exactly who needs a follow-up today.”

Same effort. Better system. Less stress. More booked jobs.

Chapter 1 Summary (One Sentence)

A CRM is one place to track every lead, their status, and the next step — so revenue stops slipping away.

Chapter 1 Checklist (Completion Standard)

This chapter is complete when: - You have one place chosen as your CRM - Every lead gets logged - Statuses are used consistently - Every lead has a next step - You review it daily

Do not move on until this feels boring and automatic.
